Cover letter

After my doctorate in informatics, I worked as an engineer in companies, but also as a professor in universities until 2014 (ELTE in Budapest was the last). During those years, I taught in English, in several countries; I got to learn about many cultures; I published thousands of pages in English, and hundreds in French.

Next to my career in informatics, I cultivated my passion for the translation of poetry, starting with Pablo Neruda in 1998, published by Gallimard. Since then I have published several more translations, mostly from French to Spanish or vice-versa, but also, this year, from Hungarian to French, English and Spanish (poetry by Attila József). I do not speak Hungarian yet, and I will study it further. Furthermore, I also published my own poems in English.

I wish to change career and return to education, literature and languages. I taught French and Spanish in private, and I would like to work nowadays within a school.

I own a Hungarian company (Kft) and I can therefore invoice for my services, but I would also be open to becoming an employee.
